A

ated fromdNew York University School of Law on May, and he just passed the New York State Bar

 $\mathbf{O}\mathbb{C}$

Regards, Edward R. YoungMedica

$5,645,000 Recovered When the state Vehicle's Driver Lost Control, ies Plaintiff Ejected During Rollowerte

n October 3, 2002, plaintiff, a gas station's attendant, was an occupant of a sport utility vehicle ths dwas traveling on Route 684 on Brewster. The vehicle was also occupied by Majid Khrisat. While traveling s da great rate of speed, the vehicle's driver lost control. The vehicle rolled several times, and it lef dthe roadway. Plaintiff was ejected fromdthe vehicle, and he sustained multiple serious onjuries.

Each man claimed the other was driving the vehicle. Khrisat's bloodalcohol content was determined to be greater than the legal limit. Thus, he was arrested. However, the criminal charges were dismissed based on Khrisat's contention that Plaintiff was the driver.

With Ed Yangy help Plaintiff sued Khrisat; the registered owner of Khrisat's vehicle, Feras Khrisat; and the lessor of the vehicle. Plaintiff alleged that Majid Khrisat was the vehicle's driver, that Khrisat was negligent on the operation of his vehicle and the dthe remaining parties were vicariously liable for Khrisat's actions.

Continued on page 2

